Onset & Rime

Onset and rime are the two parts of a syllable. The rime is the vowel and everything after it. The onset is the consonant, consonant blend, or digraph that comes before the rime. Two syllable words have two onsets and two rimes.

Teaching children that words contain recognizable chunks is key to developing reading fluency. As students read multisyllabic words, they gain a deeper understanding that words contain recognizable chunks. The chunks that make up onsets and rimes are called phonograms. Phonograms and reliable and generalizable. Most of them make consistent sound across words.

Word Lists

There are three sets of word lists. One set provide the rime and many of the onsets that go with that rime to create common "real" words. Another set provides the onset and many of the rimes that go with that onset. I use these lists to help me find the cards I need for a certain activity with certain patterns.

The other set of cards are lists of words by onset and rime (v_e, vowel team, etc.). I glue these word lists into students' notebooks so they can read and practice the lists during small groups and independently. I start with the words by word family/rime and then move onto the mixed lists for review.

Matching Cards

These matching cards help students create a variety of real an nonsense words. Students can engage with them in a variety of ways, including, reading just the rimes and matching various onsets to the same rime.

To assemble, simple print and laminate for durability. Cut apart on the lines and the onsets will match up to the rimes with very little space. Print on different colored paper for each vowel pattern to help students discriminate the sounds.

Flip Cards

These flip cards can be used as an independent activity for students to practice reading word patterns, or they can become a part of your small group routine. The most common rimes are included for each sound. The cards are set up to have multiple onsets for one rime.

To assemble

Print the rimes that students need to practice. Print the corresponding onsets. Laminate (optional). Cut apart on the dotted lines. If laminated, punch holes in the cards and put on a ring. If not laminated, match the correct onsets to the rimes that make real words.
